VIKING VS. SAMURAI

Illustrated by Lucas Rocha Santiago

The first duty of Samurai was loyalty to his lord.

忠

The word “samurai” meant “those who serve.”

Samurai served his master by protecting his lands.

Samurai lived in his master's city and trained with his soldiers.

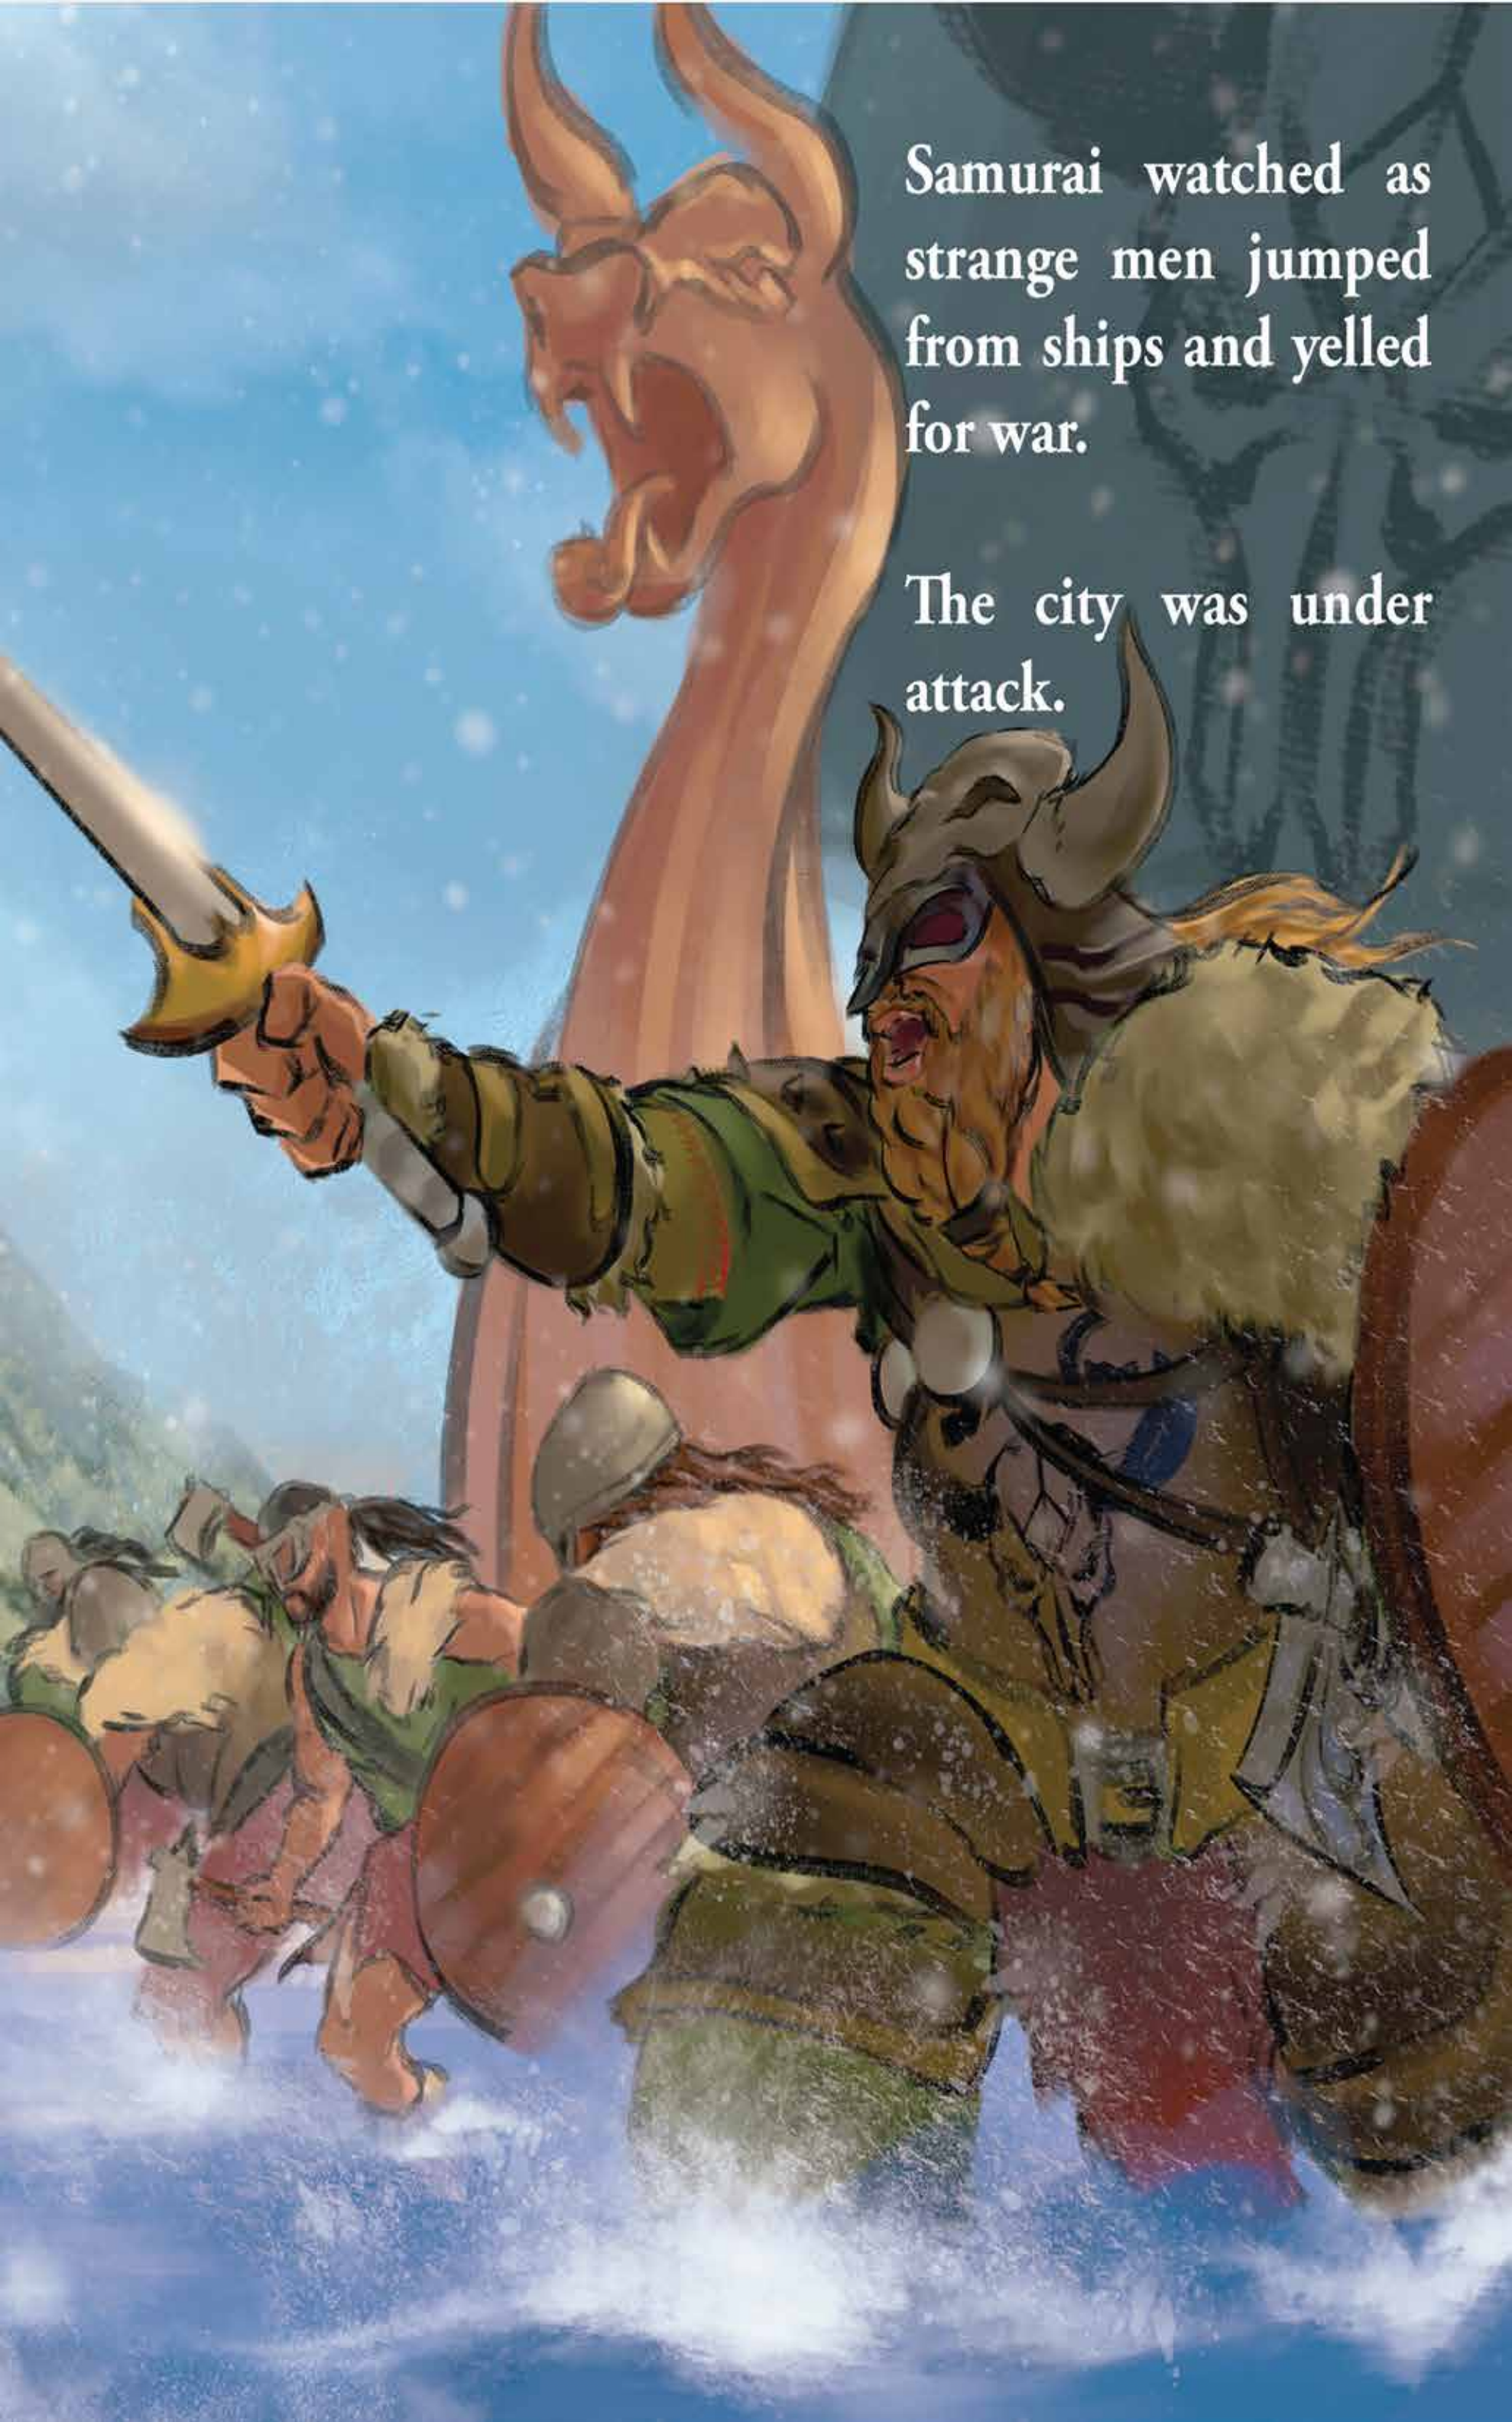

Everyday, he taught them how to fight.

The ringing bells meant only one thing: an enemy was approaching.

Suddenly, one day during training, the city alarm was sounded!

Samurai watched as strange men jumped from ships and yelled for war.

The city was under attack.
